...and a Happy New Year! By the time you read this, we may well be on the other side of Christmas or nearly so (though hopefully Christmas is not just a fading memory by then), and approaching the great unknown, better known as the year two-thousand eighteen. So, here we are, poised to cross over the threshold of the doorway into the next stage of our lives. Think of it! Really! How do you visualize this moment?

A new year is a time to consider “first things”: so you might imagine those first babies born, those first flubs writing 2017 on your checks instead of 2018, that first crisis between resolutions made and the challenge of keeping them, the first payment on a new deductible, and as always, choices about first priorities.

Or, you might picture the year 2018 as...

...a slate blackboard wiped clean of last year’s mistakes or missteps, on which to record this year’s lessons,

...a book full of blank pages awaiting the writing of the next chapters of the story of your life on them,

...a vast and uncharted map of the black reaches of space stretching out before you, or

...a sunny and inviting smooth expanse of untouched sandy beach upon which to tramp some new direction (s).

Joshua 3 is a great account of God’s people “on the brink,” too. After wandering around the Sinai Peninsula 40 years, God’s people finally wind up on the eastern shore of the Jordan River. There they wait for the green light to enter Canaan, the wonderful land of promise that had sadly been off-limits until the sinful, disobedient prior generation had been purged by time and death. The new generation had only heard and dreamed about a land all their own, the vision of a life spent in one place where they could finally put down roots, build houses, plant gardens, mow grass! Read the story and look for the life lessons for yourself.

You might want to consider the Regrets to be left behind, the Reliefs to be embraced, the Resolutions to be adopted, and the Requests to be made of the Lord, as a format for finding the future God promises.

May this journey of discovery and awareness be one of joy and fulfillment. Blessings, Pastor Eric
